A photograph of a modern kitchen interior. The space features large, light-colored concrete pillars and a large island with a dark, textured base and a light-colored countertop. A large, rectangular concrete structure is mounted on the wall above the island. The ceiling is made of concrete and has several small, square, recessed lights. The floor is made of dark, square tiles. In the foreground, there is a table with a light-colored top and a dark base, with some small objects on it. In the background, there is a window with white curtains and a view of trees outside.
